

CIHR Training Grant in Health Law, Ethics and Policy

CALL FOR APPLICATIONS

Discover all the possibilities with our innovative graduate program in Health Law, Ethics and Policy

The program aims to equip students with skills necessary to address the legal and ethical challenges presented by quick evolving changes in health care. Students will have the opportunity to interact with internationally renowned Canadian scholars of health law, ethics and policy, government decision-makers and will have the support of multidisciplinary team of mentors.

Key benefits of the program include:

- A CIHR Training Stipend ($17,500) for eligible candidates
- Travel support for various program events such as the training Boot Camp for incoming students, the Annual Colloquium, the Annual Skills Workshop and The National Health Law Conference
- Attendance at The Health Law, Ethics and Policy Seminar Series
- Support on research projects from a variety of multi-disciplinary mentors
- Enhanced Ethics training
- Peer Review Opportunities
- Opportunities to apply for internships within Health Canada, provincial ministries of health, and a variety of health care organizations worldwide

Application Information

The Program welcomes applications from domestic and international law graduate students (both at the Masters and Doctoral level) based at any of our training partners: Dalhousie University, University of Alberta, Université de Sherbrooke, University of Toronto.

For further information, visit our website: www.healthlawtraining.ca or contact us at info@healthlawtraining.ca

Part of the Canadian Institutes of Health Research (CIHR)'s Strategic Training Initiative in Health Research (STIHR).
In Collaboration with the following training Universities:

